"She understood quickly the mean ing of his mute message, and recovering, turned again to her attorney.

"Very well, Mr. Redgers, but w should have known this before. You will wire immediately to my sister,

"I am truly sorry, Miss, and I shall wire immediately."

He bowed, walked toward the door they following. Scott bent low and whispered into Anita's ear, "We must keep quiet, Ann-for your sake. She smiled up at him radiantly, and catching hold of his arm, pressed it impulsively, a token of her appreciation for his infinite consideration. The next morning Ann received a telegram from her sister, Bess, in the East. "Ordered to take rest in mountains. Too much study. Will be home in a day." Bess came, and the sisters went at once to the mountains, Scott agreeing to meet them there later. VI.

Scott arrived late the night of the same day. The next morning he proposed a walk over the mountainside, and was eagerly seconded by Ann. Bess, however, wearied and sore with the previous day's ride, announced that she was all "in," and would await their return at the hotel. Ann noted with keen displeasure Scott's disappointment, at Bess's announcement, and was further vexed when he proposed that they stay and keep Bess company thought of Bess, as she had looked that morning at breakfast, her liquid eyes, chestnut curly hair, and slim curved shoulders, making her look, he thought, more like a wood-nymph than a human. He thought now fine it would be could she be there just in the path shead of him. How well she would fit into the picture of rugged mountains, framed by a sweep of glorious blue sky.

Bess wouldn't hear of their staying (Copyright, 1915, by Antoinette Donbehind, so they started for their stroll nelly.),

Anita had come up close behind him, panting, but supple and eager, her fine young frame moving in quick, graceful strides along the trail. Suddenly he was aware of the sound of loosening pebbles rolling down the clin behind him-Heard her startled cry as she lost her footing-felt her tense, desperate grip on his arm as she lost her foot-

Turning half way around, he saw that she was hanging half over the cliffside, her face pale and horror-stricken, her only hope for life, outside of a miracle-centering itself in her grip on his arm. He saw at a st sheer declivity of mountainside, and a sickening dread overcame him.

V11. Scott feared for himself, the knew what it would make, should his strength be not great enough to hold out. He would be carried ever the side of the cliff with the one clinging to him! His foot slipped slightly, dislodging a pebble that bounced its echoing way down the mountainside. A horrible, cold dread was on him. His feet were slipping! With a quie't, fearful, desperate stroke he struck her hand from his arm, and, shrinking back against the wall, watched her start on her downward slide, dragging a host of rattling pebbles in her wake.

She had slid about fifty feet when her outstretched, frantically-grasping

Alfred, disappointed at Bess's absence, and Ann anxious and trying mentally to laugh away the fears that played shadow-like but persistent in her mind. They took a narrow footpath that wound its way around the mountainside, hugging tightly the wall to their left, for in some places on their right the path stopped abruptly and the cliff side fell sheer away into sickening space.

He took the lead, keeping about two feet in advance of her, and walking quickly, his feet unconsciously keeping pace with his thoughts. He thought of Bess, as she had looked

CLUSTER SPRINGS CLOSES ITS FIFTIETH SESSION

CLUSTER SPRINGS, VA., June 2.

CLUSTER SPRINGS, VA., June 2.— Cluster Springs Academy closed its fiftieth session of successful work on Monday. The commencement exer-cises were exceedingly interesting throughout. On Saturday evening the annual declaimers' contest attracted a large and appreciative audience. On Sunday morning the annual server conditions. Tuberculosis is a disease sunday morning the annual sermon which gains foothold upon us during infancy, and by the way of the lymphatic glands in the neck, the infection entering perhaps through decayed teeth.

STRENGTH OF AN ORGAN

IN DETERMINED BY FEW 1985. we think this measure is greatly overdone. Cleanliness of the mouth, in our opinion, is not assured by regular use of the toothbrush, for some of the worst conditions one finds are in persons who are scrupulous about brushing the teeth many times a day.

We brush ours when we feel like it—when the mouth feels like it. So do our children. And we use nobody's dentifrice, only plain soap and water.

Too much meat, too much prepared cereal food, too much refinement of the daily bread explains the bad teeth which reduce the efficiency of the race. We thoroughly believe that an undenaturized diet, and not the length of time you brush your teeth cach day, determines the final result.

A decayed tooth in a child's mouth is as much an evidence of neglect as an untreated wound on the surface of the body. It invites just as serious results.
